

ABSTRACT

A jump suit having features effective for both male and female users includes a central zippered opening (23) that extends downward from waistband (7) along the crotch (24) between left and right pants legs. A main zipper (1) controlled by a pair of keepers (27) and (28) opens and closes the opening, which extends from the waistband in front to an upper end in the back located slightly above the waistband. This enables opening over the hips when a user is relieving himself. A large lapel (8) on the front of the garment is movable by being folded from a first position where the lapel extends outward to one shoulder without crossing the center to a second position where the lapel extends toward the other shoulder and covers strip (6) of a central vertical vent. Several vents and covering strips removably controlled by zippers are provided around the periphery of a main back panel (33).